Chapter 17, General Acts of Wisconsin for 1853

An act to incorporate the State Historical Society of Wisconsin¹

The people of the State of Wisconsin, represented in Senate and Assembly, do enact as follows:

SECTION 1. That Leonard J. Farwell, Mason C. Darling, Wm. R. Smith, Charles Lord, I. A. Lapham, William H. Watson, Cyrus Woodman, James D. Doty, Morgan L. Martin, Lyman C. SECTION 2. ¹The "Historical Society of Wisconsin" was organized January 30, 1849, but had not previously been incorporated. The initial word "State" was introduced in the title at the time of incorporation.

The original charter is herein published merely on account of its historic interest. Since 1853, however, the laws of Wisconsin concerning the Society have frequently been amended and its powers extended, so that the old act bears slight resemblance to present statutes affecting the institution, which is now a trustee of the State, and virtually one of its commissions. The new constitution, adopted in 1897 and published herewith, was rendered essential because of these statutory changes and the enlarged scope of the corporation.

May hold and at pleasure alienate, any other personal and Volumes 1-x were edited and annotated by Lyman C. Draper; Vols. xi-xx by Reuben G. Thwaites. Vols. 1-iv were also issued as part of the Governor's Message and Documents for 1855, 1856, 1857, and 1860 respectively. Vols. ii and iii were also published in the German and Norwegian languages (but unfortunately the Society does not possess a copy of the German edition of Vol. iii). In accordance with chapter 135, laws of 1866, authorizing the publication, Vol. v was issued in three separate parts. Commencing with Vol. xi, the Reports of the executive committee were omitted from the Collections, the former being thereafter published in connection with the annual Proceedings, q. v. A page-for-page reprint edition of Vols. 1-x was published in 1903-09 by order of the Legislature; this edition was enriched by numerous illustrations. Vol. x contains an unsatisfactory general index to Vols. 1-x; Vol. xxi will consist of a freshly-prepared analytical index, on modern lines, to the preceding twenty volumes.

Reports and Proceedings

The Society did not contemporaneously publish its proceedings under the first organization, 1849-1854, but brief newspaper reports thereof were usually prepared by one of its officers. Its manuscript records for those years were published in 1903 for the first time, in the reprint edition of the Collections, vol. 1, pp. xxx-lxx.

Neither under the reorganization of the Society was there any official publication of the proceedings of annual meetings until 1887. From 1854 to that year there were published, however, sometimes in abbreviated form, the annual Reports of the executive committee, which summarized the Society's activities for the year; these appear in the first ten volumes of the Collections. The proceedings of the years 1854-1886, other than those referred to in the committee's Reports, still exist only in the manuscript minute-books of the Society. During 1875-1886, there were printed separates from the Collections, of the committee's Reports for those years.

From the time of the thirty-fourth annual meeting (held January 6, 1887), there has each year been published the Proceedings of the annual meeting itself; this volume containing all reports and papers presented at such meeting. Because of this change of policy, some confusion necessarily arose as to the numbering of these volumes. When only the Report of the executive committee was published, this publication took on the number of the Report itself—i. e., the committee's first annual Report was presented at the second annual meeting, and so on. But when the Proceedings began to appear, it was necessary to append thereto the number of the annual meeting therein reported. Thus is explained the apparent hiatus between the Thirty-second Annual Report (1886) and the Proceedings of the Thirty-fourth Annual Meeting (1887). These respective publications are in fact consecutive.

Wisconsin Historical Society

An explanation is desirable, also, as to the numbering of the institution's annual meetings. The Society of today is, in truth, the Society of 1849, with but a change of constitution in 1853; there was no break whatever in the continuity. Although the annual meeting held January 2, 1875 (when Reports began to be separately issued), is officially styled the twenty-second; in reality it was the twenty-sixth—the unfortunate habit having arisen of numbering the meetings since the reorganization. What will actually be the sixty-fifth annual meeting will be held in October, 1914; but its official number will be the sixty-first.

Superintendent

The constitutions of both 1849 and 1854 provided for a corresponding secretary and a recording secretary. Chapters 89, Laws of Wisconsin for 1897, changed the title of the "corresponding secretary" to "secretary," and this was confirmed by the Society's new constitution of December 16, 1897. On February 10, 1898, the executive committee ordered that thereafter the secretary be also designated as "superintendent." On October 24, 1912, the constitution and by-laws were so amended that "superintendent" became thereafter the sole title of the office. The following persons have held this position:

Recording Secretary

The following persons have held this position. Its last incumbent, Mr. Burdick, died July 18, 1896. On December 10 of the same year, the Society discontinued the office, its duties being thereupon merged with those of the corresponding secretary.

Librarian

By resolution of the executive committee adopted February 10, 1898, the librarian was also given the title of "assistant superintendent." Mr. Bradley, the last incumbent, died April 22, 1912. On October 24 following, the Society so amended its constitution and by-laws that the office of librarian and assistant superintendent was abolished—the duties appertaining thereto being merged with those of the superintendent. The following persons have held the position of librarian:

JOHN W. HUNT	January 18, 1854
CHARLES LORD	March 14, 1854
JULIUS P. ATWOOD	June 6, 1854

DANIEL S. DURRIE L	January 1, 1856
ISAAC S. BRADLEY	September 6, 1892

Officers, 1849-1913

Assistant Librarian

Miss Durrie served as assistant librarian, on the Society's pay-roll, from her election to her death, October 19, 1889. Chapter 251, Laws of Wisconsin for 1875, created, however, the statutory office of assistant librarian, on the state pay-roll, and to this position Mr. Bradley was elected. To this statutory office, Miss Oakley and Miss Nunns succeeded in turn, as indicated. But Chapter 422, Laws for 1909, took this office from the state pay-roll, and on June 21 of that year it was abolished by the executive committee.

The vas deferens are the ducts which carry the sperm from the testes to the ureters. The ureters are the ducts which carry the urine from the kidneys to the bladder. The accessory glands are the prostate, seminal vesicles, and bulbourethral glands. The prostate is a gland which is situated between the bladder and the rectum. The seminal vesicles are small glands which are situated behind the bladder. The bulbourethral glands are small glands which are situated in the male urethra. The female reproductive system is composed of the ovaries, uterine tubes, uterus, and vagina. The ovaries are the primary sex organs, and are located in the pelvic cavity. Phosphorus compounds are of great importance in the chemistry of life. They are found in all living organisms and are essential for the growth and development of all life forms. The most important phosphorus compounds are the phosphates, which are the primary source of energy for all living organisms. They are also found in the bones and teeth of mammals, where they provide structural support. In addition, phosphorus is a key component of many biological molecules, including DNA, RNA, and proteins. The study of phosphorus compounds is therefore a crucial part of understanding the chemistry of life.

The phosphorus cycle is a natural process by which phosphorus is recycled in the environment. It begins with the weathering of rocks, which releases phosphorus into the soil. From there, it can be taken up by plants and animals, or it can be converted into a form that is available to other organisms. The cycle is completed when the phosphorus is eventually released back into the soil through the decomposition of organic matter.

Phosphorus is also an important component of many industrial processes. It is used in the production of fertilizers, which are essential for the growth of crops. It is also used in the manufacture of detergents, where it helps to break down grease and dirt. In addition, phosphorus is used in the production of many other products, including glass, ceramics, and plastics.

The study of phosphorus compounds is a complex and fascinating field. It involves the use of a wide range of techniques, including spectroscopy, chromatography, and mass spectrometry. By studying these compounds, scientists can gain a better understanding of the chemistry of life and the environment, and they can develop new ways to use phosphorus in industry and agriculture.
